DAD
Someone was up working late last night.

MOM Guilty.

MOM (CONT'D)
(yawning)
I'm so tired.

DAD
Babe I told you, you have to make time for yourself.

MOM
I know...soon. Right now I have to get a package to the Post Office before it closes.

Dad walks over to the window and looks out at Foster.

DAD
It's going to be a long day.

MOM
For you too?

DAD
I'm talking about Foster.

MOM
Ah. I tried to watch him practice last night but it was too painful.

DAD
Clearly he didn't inherit my athletic gene.

CUT TO:

DAD (CONT'D)
Foster I'm going to wait over there.

FOSTER
(nods)

Dad inconspicuously makes his way toward the COACH(45).

DAD
Hey, how's it going man?

COACH (SPITS, GRUNTS and gives dad a once over)

DAD
Yeah, so I have a couple tickets to the music fest in a couple weeks.

COACH
How's that?

DAD (winks)
The one downtown on the water front. I even have meal tickets and VIP parking.

COACH
What's wrong, your kid can't play?

DAD
I think it's his equipment. Got him the best of everything. Strangely it's seems to be restricting him.

Dad exaggerates hand movement to illustrate "grip."

COACH
Restriction, huh?

Foster sees his dad and narrows his eyes. Dad stares back at Foster then eases away from Coach.

DAD
Okay, Yep. Great day for tryouts!

Coach shakes his head at Dad.

Coach addresses the group of boys.

COACH (SPITS)
I'm looking at technique and skill.
You know? How you pitch, catch and bat, how fast you run. If you're not chosen, it doesn't mean "no," it's means "not now."
